

Wedding Vow 3 – Written by Clients

Read by Officiant:

You are not perfect. You will never be perfect, but if you can make each other laugh once a day, make each other think and smile once a day, admit we are all human and make mistakes – then you can respect each other, love each other and give the most you both have each day.

You both are probably not going to quote poetry, you are not going to be thinking about each other every moment, but you are giving each other a part of yourselves you know the other can break. Don't hurt one another, don't try to change one another and don't expect more than the other has to give. Don't critique – suggest, don't analyze – observe and think about why something that may be bothering you could be a reflection of your own issue.

Smile if he or she makes you happy, yell if they make you mad, and miss each other if they are not there. Love hard when there is love to be had. Because perfect people don't exist, but there is a perfect partner And we vow to be the best partners you can for each other.

Please Join Hands and Face Each Other

Tracy, will you take Jordan for your lawfully wedded spouse? Will you love him, comfort him, honor and keep him, in sickness and in health, in adversity and prosperity, for better or worse, throughout all the days of your life?

Jordan, will you take Tracy for your lawfully wedded spouse? Will you love her, comfort her, honor and keep her, in sickness and in health, in adversity and prosperity, for better or worse, throughout all the days of your life?

Jordan, please repeat after me. "With this ring I marry you, and I promise you my love and faithfulness"

And now, in as much as Tracy and Jordan have consented together in marriage, and have declared the same before witnesses and thereto have given and pledged their love and faithfulness to each other, by the authority vested in me I pronounce you married under the laws of the State of California.